
Dear Readers,

It is with great pleasure that we present the latest issue of the quarterly magazine “Disability – Issues, Problems, Solutions” (No. II/2025(55)), which continues our mission of presenting interdisciplinary knowledge and innovative solutions, focusing on key areas of life for people with disabilities.

In the section titled “Socio-Economic Aspects of Disability” we analyse the strategic importance of including people with disabilities in modern, sustainable development practices, under the heading “Putting the I in ESG: Inclusion of Persons with Disabilities as a Strategic Advantage in Sustainability Practices for Corporates and Investors”. This study provides definitions and indicators (KPIs) for investors and companies, promoting a comprehensive approach to ESG reporting that goes beyond mere workforce representation.

The “Employment” section focuses on the characteristics of people with intellectual disabilities who are well-adapted to the work situation and participate in occupational therapy workshops. The article analyses these people’s adaptive skills profiles, their professional preferences, and subjective perspectives on work, highlighting their potential and motivation.

In the “Rehabilitation” section, we explore the boundaries of technological innovation. The article “Virtual Reality in Rehabilitation: a System of Applications Supporting the Rehabilitation of Stroke Patients” explains how immersive VR can increase motivation and improve exercise effectiveness.

The section “Support Systems for People with Disabilities” contains an analysis titled “Application of the ICF Methodology in the Treatment of People with Mental Illness as an Example of the Integrating Healthcare, Social Assistance and Rehabilitation: The Case of the Mental Health Centre+ Project”. This is an important contribution to the debate on integrating therapeutic and social activities.

We hope that the materials presented here will contribute to deepening knowledge and supporting practical actions for full inclusion.

We wish you an inspiring and fruitful read.
